INTRODUCTION

Canadian Parks Service (CPS) staff require more innovative ways of accessing key information sources to assist them in the planning, management and delivery of Coastal Paddling opportunities and related services.

This introductory guide to information sources on Coastal Paddling has been developed for CPS staff, particularly regional Visitor Activity Specialists. The information sources identified herein represent a synthesis of potential data sources that has been developed over a relatively short period of intensive research.

Coastal Paddling can be defined as a water sport consisting of canoeing or kayaking along large freshwater or ocean shorelines. It includes both day and overnight trips and is especially popular on the west coast (Canada and US). Other names for this activity are sea kayaking, ocean canoeing and coastal kayaking.

In order to develop a concise and practical guide to the most useful information sources, the following criteria were used to gather and screen material.

1. Post publication date 1980.
2. Material must be accessible to CPS staff.
3. Comprehensive and representative examples.
4. High quality reports and studies.
5. Emphasis on Canadian information sources and include international examples where appropriate.

The introductory guide should be used in conjunction with approved planning processes, (Visitor Activity Management Process and A Guide to Service Planning),as well as your own information systems, experience, and existing "informal networks." It will be necessary to look beyond this guide for more detailed information.

Local publications should also be used to keep the reader informed of courses, seminars, exhibits, and learning opportunities in their region.

FORMAT

This guide has been organized by the following subject headings:

1. Activity Description - with definition of activity, setting, time of year, skills, equipment

2. Experience/Behavior - needs expectations from a visitor perspective and from a management perspective, departure information, evaluation

3. Market Characteristics - origin, age, sex, language, group size, group composition, mode of access, education, occupation, length of stay, park use patterns, trends

4. Operations - day to day operations of campgrounds and related services and facilities.

5. Planning - planning for the provision of camping services.

6. Public Safety - accident prevention, search and rescue services, park user safety information, and control, programs, hazard monitoring, and abatement programs, and public safety planning.

7. Resource Protection - measures taken to prevent damage caused by human or natural agents to the resources of the park or site.

8. Trends - changes in the paddling market, styles of paddling, equipment, setting desired and use patterns.

For each major subject heading a list of information sources is provided with sample references.
Sources include:

1. Articles;
2. Books;
3. Directories (advisory information);
4. Guidebooks (a book of information often for travellers);
5. Reports;
6. Technical/standards information (specialized and technical knowledge).

OTHER INFORMATION SOURCES

Libraries

Libraries provide:
- an organized collection of general information sources
- basic references, books, texts, reports, periodicals, and a large collection of technical information.
- access to electronic databases
- personal assistance in finding information
- specialized libraries for trade, research and non-governmental organizations. Government departments should also be consulted.

Computerized Information Retrieval

Sources provided include:
- automated information retrieval.
- booklets containing information on the databases which they offer.

"Host" "supplier" or "vendor" are names given to commercial organizations with large and often sophisticated computers that produce databases available on-line to any user who buys into it (dialing in from remote sites). Users are provided with and opportunity to subscribe to one or more hosts for a nominal fee. These databases can be accessed through a library provided they have the facilities. Searches are most effective if the topic is specific.

Periodicals

This includes:
- journals, serials, and magazines. Many publications are produced at regular intervals and may be more current than other sources of information.
- information on current projects, practice, and techniques

Unless otherwise indicated, the books and periodicals included in this bibliography can be obtained at the various locations listed below.
